DETAILED ACTION

Prosecution Status

Applicant's amendments filed 8/5/2010 have been received and reviewed. The status of the claims is as follows:

Claims 5-8, 12-16, 24, 26, and 28-30 are pending. Claims 3, 11, and 17-21 have been cancelled by the applicant.

EXAMINER'S AMENDMENT

An examiner's amendment to the record appears below. Should the changes and/or additions be unacceptable to applicant, an amendment may be filed as provided by 37 CFR 1.312. To ensure consideration of such an amendment, it MUST be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee.

The application has been amended as follows:

In the Title

~~Product common object~~ Methods and computer-readable medium for defining a product model

Reasons for Allowance

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The present invention is directed towards a method and system for illustrating where at least one ticket is located in an event venue. Independent claims 24 and 26 each teach the novel features of: extracting a source set of product management information, wherein the source set is stored within a source set of fields; converting the source set of product management information into a common set of product management information, the common set of product management information is stored within a common set of fields of the product common model; and subsequently converting the common set of product management information into a target set of product management information, the target set is stored within a target set of fields; wherein each field of the common set of fields corresponds to a source field in a source set of fields of product management information, the source set of fields comprises at least one source field that does not correspond to any field of the common set of fields, the each field of the common set of fields further corresponds to a target field in a target set of fields of product management information, and the target set of fields comprises at least one target field that does not correspond to any field of the common set of fields.

Independent claim 28 teaches the novel features of: extracting the first source product management information, wherein the first source product management information is in one of a plurality of source formats; converting the first source product management information into an intermediate format; extracting the second product management information, wherein the second source product management information is in another of the plurality of source formats; converting the second source product management information into the intermediate format; integrating the converted first and second source product management information into integrated source product management information; converting the integrated source product management information into target product management information, wherein the target product management information is in a target format; and updating the target computerized product management system with the target product management information, wherein the existing target product management information comprises the target record.

In addition to the above distinguishing features, the Examiner emphasizes the interrelation of the noted features with the remainder of each respective claim element. Moreover, when taken as a whole, the claims including the above noted limitations are not rendered obvious as the available prior art does not teach, suggest, or otherwise render obvious the noted features, nor does the available prior art suggest or otherwise render obvious further modification of the evidence at hand. Such modifications would require a substantial reconstruction of the claimed invention relying solely on improper hindsight bias, and thus would not be obvious.

The following reference has been identified as the most relevant prior art to the claimed invention(s). The prior art generally relates to the conversion of data from one format to another. Rappaport (US 6828963 B1) discloses Pattern matching for data exchange between computer aided design systems. Rappaport does not anticipate nor render obvious: extracting a source set of product management information, wherein the source set is stored within a source set of fields; converting the source set of product management information into a common set of product management information, the common set of product management information is stored within a common set of fields of the product common model; and subsequently converting the common set of product management information into a target set of product management information, the target set is stored within a target set of fields; wherein each field of the common set of fields corresponds to a source field in a source set of fields of product management information, the source set of fields comprises at least one source field that does not correspond to any field of the common set of fields, the each field of the common set of fields further corresponds to a target field in a target set of fields of product management information, and the target set of fields comprises at least one target field that does not correspond to any field of the common set of fields.

Further, Rappaport does not anticipate nor render obvious: extracting the first source product management information, wherein the first source product management information is in one of a plurality of source formats; converting the first source product management information into an intermediate format; extracting the second product management information, wherein the second source product management information is in another of the plurality of source formats; converting the second source product management information into the intermediate format; integrating the converted first and second source product management information into integrated source product management information; converting the integrated source product management information into target product management information, wherein the target product management information is in a target format; and updating the target computerized product management system with the target product management information, wherein the existing target product management information comprises the target record.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure: "Extract simplifies file conversion" (PTO-892 reference U).
